New York State deals generously by its dairymen. It has appropriated $2500 to dairymen's association to be expended in holding dairy institutes at the dairy or factory with illustrations in the making of butter and of cheese, the entire process or manufacturing to be performed before the assembled farmers by experts in the work. Another appropriation of $5000 is placed in the hands of the dairy commissioner of the State, with which to employ instructors to visit dairies and factories, and give instruction in the latest and most approved methods, after the manner of the aid rendered by the Canadian government some years ago, through which the business was logreatly improved and developed in the Provinces.

Step out amid nature and consider for a moment what is going on around you. What changes, what developments, what creations! Who shall say why, how and for whom is this done?

Over two-thirds of the omnibus horses of Paris are gray. They are drawn from all the horse-breeding districts of France, and in what is giften the part of the color of the draft horses of France. The remarkable record of nine years average service of the 12,800 horses on the stone pavements of 12,800 horses on the stone pavements of Paris, is a wonderful record of durability.

The premium list for the thirty-eighth annual fair of the North Aroostook Agricultural Society is out on time. The exhibition is to be held on the society's grounds at Presque Isle, Sept. 18—20. Liberal premiums and purses are offered, and the society goes in for a good time all around. Success is a wonderful stimulant. This is year of the flourishing societies. one of the flourishing societies.

Neglects now, wherever allowed, or whatever the crop, are fatal to success. Some farmers start out well, but their vigilance falls at the vital point, and the result is that a partial failure meets them at the end. Whatever a farmer starts out with in springtime no neglect on his part should be allowed to come between him and a full success.

Bro. A. A. Brigham, Master of the Massachusetts State Grange, was a member of their last legislature, and in summing up the work of the session relating to agricultural affairs, he exhorts farmers to send mes to the legislature, and send them pledged to the interest they represent. Will our farmers take notice at the coming election? At the least it will be well to let the candidates know that their work will be watched.

for the effort, The full reports given in our paper, this week, complied by our large and intelligent corps of correspondents, scattered throughout the length and breadth of the State, will give our readers a clear and comprehensive view of the present condition and known as has prospects of the crops. The hay crop casily maintains its lead; grass had a good outright.

"Old fields The Wealthy look badly," say some of the correspondents. And why shouldn't the old and a seedling of worn out fields look badly? The hand of industry and the work of the fertilizer, well applied, will make them "bud and were they grows and the work of the fertilizer, well applied, will make them "bud and were they grows and the fertilizer." blessom as the rose." Raising corn for the corn canning factories has become a popular and profitable industry. A larger mended for a popular and prontable industry. A larger breadth of good, old fashloned, substantial yellow corn, is being put in. Apple trees blossomed well, but the fruit has not set as well as might be expected, though a fair fruit crop is promised. The area of grain is large, as much land designed for hoed crops, or account of the lateress of the corners of the lateress of th is large, as much land designed for hoed crops, on account of the lateness of the season (about two weeks behind last year) was laid down to grain. About the usual acreage is devoted to potatoes. The pastures are green, and stock went to them in splendid condition. The butter factories are doing a fine business, and in those localities where they are not yet established, active, efforts are being made to weight of the season of the lished, active efforts are being made to keeping Russ secure their benefits. pondents agree in the statement that the transparent that the lase of commercial fertilizers is on the increase, and farmers are more than ever ready to acknowledge their advantage. We need not ask our readers to read carefully the interesting and suggestive letters from the large of our correspondents, for we know they still dother we have readers their confident that the will do so; and from their consideration they will come to the same conclusion that we have—that the agricultural population of Maine may be reckoned among our most prosperous and contented people.

Having Haying.

most prosperous and contented people.

Haying.

Haying will soon be in order and must claim the chief attention of the farmer. With so much to be done in a short time, as is the case with us in our State where hay is the leading crop, other work must, of necessity, be laid aside for the time, and the chief energy be given to haying. It is now pretty well settled among all hands, that the most nutriment is stored up in the grasses at the time they have fully matured their growth. This is the time, then, to anatch them up for stock food. Taken at that time all their nutrients are captured, and held for the time of needed use. If properly dried and safely housed, there is no loss whatever in quantity, nor deterioration of quality of this food material. In drying, the water contained has passed off and all else remains. These nutrients are in every way as digestible, and will render up to the animal fed on them as large a proportion of their coxtents as if they had been fed before the water had been evaporated from them.

The sim of the farmer should must the same handsome!

The same of the farmer should then be to accure the crop of hay when it is at its best. When cut too early the hay is deficient in nutrition; if it stands till over-ripe it changes in part to a woody form, and less of it is digestible. To begin earlier does not meet the case, for then there is loss of material, both from immaturity and from the less quantity on account of the growth not having been finished. What is wanted is to harvest the crop in less time. To this end every effort put forth. But on large farms it is not practicable to harvest all the crop when it is at its best. In that case some must be cut before its time and some stand later. Just here is a chance for the excersise of a sound judgment. Some fall its order when it is at its best.
